

Old Testament Prophets

SABBATH AFTERNOON

Read for This Week's Study: James 5:17, 18; 1 Kings 19:1–16; 1 Kings 22:1–14; Exod. 15:20; 2 Kings 22:11–14; Jer. 14:1–15.

Memory Text: “Jehoshaphat stood and said, ‘Hear me, O Judah and you inhabitants of Jerusalem: Believe in the LORD your God, and you shall be established; believe His prophets, and you shall prosper’” (2 Chronicles 20:20, NKJV).

The Global Positioning System (GPS) helps travelers know where they are, where they are going, and even provides warnings against hazards. Spiritual travelers journeying to heaven also need guidance now and in the future from a heavenly “positioning system.” One way that God did this in times past was through the ministry of Old Testament prophets. In their narratives, counsels, prophecies, poetry, and songs, we discover a lot about the dozens of prophets who presented God’s messages to the people.

This week’s lesson explores Old Testament descriptions of prophets, descriptions that help us understand the gift of prophecy as it had been manifested by some of these servants of God.

As we will see, these were people like us, in that they were frail human beings subject to fear, anger, and discouragement. Life for them was not easy but filled with challenges and hardships, as it is for all of us.

What, then, can we learn from looking at a few of these specially called servants of God?

 Study this week’s lesson to prepare for Sabbath, October 17.*

The Humanity of Prophets

As we saw last week, the Lord used Elijah the prophet to do a tremendous work in Israel, despite fervent opposition. What the Lord had accomplished through him was incredible. And yet . . . what?

Reflect on how James presents Elijah the prophet in James 5:17, 18. What might he mean by saying that Elijah had “a nature like ours” (NKJV)?

Elijah had a stunning success on Mount Carmel (1 Kings 18); God had worked in a mighty way through him, and one of the most astonishing miracles depicted in Old Testament history occurred: at the sound of Elijah’s own words, fire literally came down from heaven (1 Kings 18:38)! You would have thought that this man of God would have been exceedingly happy after something like that.

Read 1 Kings 19:1–16. What does this tell us about the emotional state of God’s prophet?

“ ‘It is enough! Now, LORD, take my life, for I am no better than my fathers!’ ” (1 Kings 19:4, NKJV). This sounds like a man suffering from some form of depression. Why? What happened on Mount Carmel would not be an easy act to follow, for sure, but, still, something else is going on here.

Perhaps the key could be found in his words, “ ‘I have been very zealous for the LORD God of hosts; for the children of Israel have forsaken Your covenant, torn down Your altars, and killed Your prophets with the sword. I alone am left; and they seek to take my life’ ” (1 Kings 19:10, NKJV). This sounds as though he’s lamenting what he believes to be his failures in ministry. Apostasy remains, despite his best efforts, as if he alone could have stemmed the tide. Whatever ultimately is going on here, we can see the humanity and fragility of this man of God. In other words, Elijah was a man who had “a nature like ours.”

Why might it be easy at times to have a sense of “failure” in your own life or endeavors? What Bible promises can you claim to help you work through discouragement?

Identifying True Prophets

In the early history of Israel, there is evidence of false prophets (Deut. 18:20). God, therefore, did not leave His people without guidance on who His true prophets were.

As recipients of God’s revelation and inspiration, true prophets faithfully, accurately, and honestly transmitted God’s messages, even if, at times, this made them unpopular with the people in power.

Read 1 Kings 22:1–14. What does it tell us about how faithful prophets operate?

To have a king say of a prophet that “ ‘I hate him, because he does not prophesy good concerning me, but evil’ ” (1 Kings 22:8, NKJV) says a lot about the king, but more about the prophet. He was, obviously, a man not afraid to speak the truth, even to the king himself—not a way to win royal favor, to say the least.

Micaiah stood alone against 400 false prophets as he presented the truth revealed to him. In the face of coercion to alter negative messages from the Lord to placate evil King Ahab and his wife, Jezebel (1 Kings 22:13, 14), Micaiah presented God’s truth, regardless of how it might be received.

Read 1 Samuel 9:3–14. What do these verses tell us about how others viewed faithful prophets of God?

There are numerous examples of the quality of life lived by prophets in the Bible. In this case, Saul was sent by his father, Kish, to look for his lost donkeys. The servant traveling with Saul suggested that he not abandon the search, because there was “ ‘in this city a man of God, and he is an honorable man’ ” (1 Sam. 9:6, NKJV). The description given here of Samuel the prophet depicts the qualities expected of God’s prophets. True prophets in Scripture are identified as “men of God,” chosen in part to exemplify His character. At the same time, just because some among the “men of God” may be prophets, this doesn’t make them flawless human beings.

Who, even among the most esteemed “men of God,” have you known to be flawless?

Functions of Prophets

Read 1 Samuel 8:4–22 and Leviticus 8:10–13. How did prophets function in relation to kings and priests?

Prophets interacted with kings in both pleasant and unpleasant situations. When the Israelites demanded a king (1 Sam. 8:4–22), they said we want “a king to judge us like all the nations” (1 Sam. 8:5). What a sad but powerful example of the danger that God’s people have faced in every age: the desire to be like those around them. In this case, they had no idea what this request would bring, even though they were forewarned (1 Sam. 8:11–18) by God through His prophet. Based on their desires, and despite his warning to them, Samuel soon anointed Israel’s first king, known in biblical history as King Saul.

The Old Testament books of 1 and 2 Kings and 1 and 2 Chronicles record the kind and quality of rulership exhibited by the kings of Israel and Judah. Sacred history shows that the kings who did evil far outnumbered those who did good in the sight of God. One of the core functions of the prophets was to help lead unfaithful kings back to obedience to God’s law. As a result, these prophets faced threats, with some even harmed and killed by kings who led God’s people away from Him (1 Kings 18:4–19, 2 Chron. 24:20–22).

Prophets also interacted with priests. Moses, a prophet of God, anointed Aaron and his sons as the first Israelite priests (Lev. 8:10–13). There were times priests received words of rebuke from God through the prophets (Hos. 6:9, Mal. 2:1–3). One striking example of this is the entire household of Eli, who were confronted for their corrupt practices (1 Sam. 2:27–36). These were some very strong rebukes against rampant corruption among people given special privileges.

Prophets were teachers of the people (2 Chronicles 34). They presented messages from God to the priests, kings, and the nation (Jer. 5:31, Ezek. 22:26). Prophets also spoke to surrounding nations outlining God’s plan for them, a theme repeated several times in the messages of the Old Testament prophets (Isa. 60:1–3; Isa. 62:1, 2). Prophets were expected not only to pass on faithfully the messages God gave them but were sometimes instructed to write them down and preserve them (2 Chron. 13:22). Again, no matter how human the prophets were (and with all the attending frailties that go with that), they were men and women of prayer, the Word, and service to God and His people (Jer. 42:4; 2 Kings 22:15–17).

Women Prophets

Read Exodus 15:20, Judges 4:4, 2 Kings 22:14, and Nehemiah 6:14.
What do these texts also teach about the prophetic role?

There is abundant evidence in Scripture that God called women to be prophets. (See the use of the Hebrew word nevi'ah [Exod. 15:20] and the Greek word prophētis [Luke 2:36].) In Micah 6:4, Miriam is listed with Moses and Aaron as those sent to the people. Miriam is presented as a prophetess who sang a song of victory when the Israelites crossed the Red Sea (Exod. 15:20, 21). Yet, this prophetess, like her male counterparts, was not without fault, as her shameful attitude toward Moses and his Ethiopian wife reveal, actions for which the prophetess had been duly punished (see Num. 12:1–10).

We can see the work of another prophet in the story of Deborah, who served as a judge in Israel (Judg. 4:1–4).

In fact, there is clear evidence that Deborah (Judg. 4:4) received revelation from God (Judg. 4:4–9, 14–22). Her song of victory (Judg. 5:2–31) is an acknowledgment of God’s intervention and had deep theological significance for the nation at that time in history.

Read 2 Kings 22:11–14. Why did King Josiah’s men go to Huldah?
What should this tell us about her important role in the nation?

Huldah “the prophetess” was consulted by the top men of King Josiah’s council (2 Kings 22:14, 2 Chron. 34:22) after they read the words of the “Book of the Law” (2 Kings 22:8, NKJV) (believed to be Deuteronomy) to the king, who, in response, “tore his clothes” (2 Kings 22:11, NKJV). This was obviously a very serious matter, and the king took it that way, which is why his men went right to Huldah. She had received a message from God regarding the impending judgment of Judah. Josiah’s reforms resulted from Huldah’s prophetic messages and averted God’s judgment on His people.

Men prophets and women prophets, though called of God, were also sinners in need of grace. What hope can you take from their stories?

False Prophets

No matter what God does, Satan has his counterfeits. It's the same with prophets. Israel faced true and false prophets. The key was to know the difference.

Read Jeremiah 14:1–15. What was happening here, and how did the Lord regard those who spoke falsely as “prophets” in His name?

In Jeremiah 14, God gave Jeremiah a message of judgment for Judah, a judgment that would come in the form of a sword (war), famine, and pestilence. False prophets at the time contradicted Jeremiah's message. Jeremiah describes them in very clear terms: “And the LORD said to me, ‘The prophets prophesy lies in My name. I have not sent them, commanded them, nor spoken to them; they prophesy to you a false vision, divination, a worthless thing, and the deceit of their heart’ ” (Jer. 14:14, NKJV).

False prophets are corrupt because their source of prophetic claims is often the false “gods” whom they worship (Jer. 23:13, 14). God warns, “ ‘I have not sent them, commanded them, nor spoken to them’ ” (Jer. 14:14, NKJV). They are “ ‘prophets of the deceit of their own heart’ ” (Jer. 23:26, NKJV). Ezekiel was instructed to prophesy against “ ‘the prophets . . . who prophesy out of their own heart’ ” (Ezek. 13:2, NKJV).

False prophets often follow popular views. This was the case in 1 Kings 22, when a group of 400 “prophets” gathered at the command of King Ahab (1 Kings 22:6). With one voice they advised the king to fight against Ramoth-Gilead. Ahab counseled with Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, after they heard the prophetic counsel from the prophets of Asherah. Jehoshaphat urged Ahab to consult the prophet Micaiah as to whether they should go to battle or not. “Then the messenger who had gone to call Micaiah spoke to him, saying, ‘Now listen, the words of the prophets with one accord encourage the king. Please, let your word be like the word of one of them, and speak encouragement’ ” (1 Kings 22:13, NKJV).

The pressure Micaiah experienced to lie was likely the same pressure felt by the false prophets of Asherah, but Micaiah did not follow this popular view; instead, he waited for God to tell him what to say (1 Kings 22:14).

Whether or not you are a prophet, it's always easy to follow the popular thing. Considering how corrupt culture can be, why is this never a good idea?

Not Perfect but Willing

As we have seen, the lives of Old Testament prophets make clear that it has never been easy to be God's messenger. Ellen G. White experienced the same anxieties that biblical prophets felt. As we learned last Friday, she was young, shy, and in poor health when she received God's call. While a second vision confirmed her call, Ellen Harmon (White) remained apprehensive about God's call, writing:

“About one week after this the Lord gave me another view, and showed me the trials I must pass through; that I must go and relate to others what he had revealed to me; that I should meet with great opposition, and suffer anguish of spirit. . . .

This vision troubled me exceedingly. My health was very poor, and I was only seventeen years old. . . . I earnestly prayed that the burden might be laid on some other one. But all the light I could get was, ‘Make known to others what I have revealed to you.’ I was unreconciled to go out into the world. I had naturally but little confidence. . . . I looked with desire into the grave. Death appeared to me preferable to the responsibilities I should have to bear.”—Spiritual Gifts, vol. 2, pp. 35, 36.

Did you notice that Ellen Harmon (White) would rather die than to accept her call? After much prayer and encouragement by fellow believers, she acquiesced and devoted the remainder of her life to following “[H]is bidding.”—Ellen G. White, Spiritual Gifts, vol. 2, p. 38.

She would become the most influential voice to—and even of—the future Seventh-day Adventist Church. Nevertheless, Ellen Harmon (White) was human and had her own personal faults and physical trials, family challenges, and interpersonal struggles. Yet amid her humanity, we see a great lesson: God chooses imperfect people who are willing to serve Him.

Under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, Ellen G. White's prophetic ministry would encourage believers and connect them to Bible truths. By 1860, she had played a leading role in the development of the fledgling Seventh-day Adventist denomination and its mission to proclaim the three angels' messages to the world. God would lead these believers to organize the Seventh-day Adventist Church in 1863. In later decades, Ellen G. White's prophetic voice was influential in establishing the global Adventist health and educational systems. However, the most important contribution of her ministry is her writings, totaling approximately 100,000 pages. Ellen G. White's inspired writings continue to speak throughout the world today.

...To Adventist Leader

By MISSION EDITOR

Marek's life began to change as he read The Great Controversy in Poland. He decided to keep the seventh-day Sabbath. He wanted to quit smoking but couldn't.

One Saturday, he passed a street poster offering a five-day, stop-smoking class at a Seventh-day Adventist church. Marek had never heard of the denomination, even after reading The Great Controversy and visiting the Adventist bookstore where he had bought the book.

Marek went straight to the church. It was two o'clock on a Saturday afternoon, and the church normally would have been empty after worship services, but a group of literature evangelists was there, and they invited Marek to return the next Sabbath morning.

Marek returned the next Sabbath and enjoyed the sermon. He was amazed at the kindness of the churchgoers. They told him that a large group of young people would meet in a nearby city the next Sabbath and invited him to go with them.

The next Sabbath morning, as Marek waited for the Adventists to pick him up, he sensed two voices speaking to him. One said, "Stay outside, and enjoy the nice weather." The other urged, "Wait here because it's really important that you go to this meeting."

The Adventists arrived and took him to the meeting. The worship service amazed Marek. Every word was meaningful to him. The preacher, a British pastor from London, spoke until noon. Then he said, "I know I am supposed to end now, but I know there is somebody here who needs Jesus."

Marek thought, Who told him about me?

The pastor then shared his personal story. He was born into a religious family but had left the church. He had used drugs and drank. His church and even his mother had stopped praying for him.

"Then I met Jesus," he said. "He took me up from the bottom where I was, and now I'm here to tell you about His power. And He can change your life. If you want Jesus to change your life, just come here to the front."

Marek saw 1,000 people in the crowd and cringed. With the very next sentence, the pastor addressed his doubts.

"Don't think about others looking at you," he said. "Just come to the front. It's between you and God."

Marek stood up. He couldn't sit anymore. His heart beat wildly as he went to the front. As the pastor prayed, Marek understood the plan of salvation for the first time. He began to cry, and nothing could stop him. The tears flowed freely. But Marek also was excited and joyful.

Today, Marek has no regrets. He serves as a church leader in Poland, and continues to share his faith.

Part I: Overview

Key Text: 2 Chronicles 20:20

Study Focus: James 5:17, 18; 1 Kings 19:1–16; 1 Kings 22:1–14; Exod. 15:20; 2 Kings 22:11–14; Jer. 14:1–15.

Introduction

Last week dealt with the prophetic calling itself; this week's lesson describes the characteristics of the prophetic gift in the Old Testament as a context for understanding Ellen G. White's prophetic ministry. The prophetic books of the Old Testament occupy a portion of the Bible roughly equivalent to the entire New Testament. Their messages were timely and significant for their various audiences. There is much we can learn from the experience of the Old Testament prophets in their ministries and how these experiences may help us to understand the prophetic ministry of Ellen G. White.

Part II: Commentary

1. Although the prophets experienced an extraordinary gift, they were still human.

The prophetic tradition in the Old Testament begins with Moses, the fountainhead of biblical prophecy. Moses acted as God's direct spokesperson, mediating the covenant between Yahweh and Israel and interceding for the people (Exod. 33:11, Deut. 34:10). His unique relationship with God, speaking "face to face," set the standard for prophetic authority. Following Moses, Samuel formalized the prophetic office, bridging the era of the judges and the monarchy. As both judge and prophet, Samuel served as God's spokesperson to the kings, notably anointing Saul and David (1 Sam. 9:15–17, 1 Sam. 16:1–13), establishing the prophet's role as a guiding and corrective voice to Israel's rulers.

Elijah introduced the role of covenant prosecutor. Unlike Moses, who often interceded for Israel, Elijah directly confronted the nation and its leaders, accusing them of covenantal unfaithfulness. His challenge on Mount Carmel (" 'How long will you go limping between two different opinions? If the LORD is God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him' " [1 Kings 18:21, ESV]) illustrates his prosecutorial role. Elijah combined messages of judgment with hope, calling Israel to repent and return to Yahweh. Thus, he introduced a new era that set the stage for all the prophets after him who delivered the prophetic message to kings and to the people (see Willem A. VanGemeren, Interpreting the Prophetic Word [Grand Rapids, MI: Zondervan, 1990], pp. 28–38).

Despite their divine authority, the prophets' humanity was evident. Moses doubted his speaking abilities (Exod. 4:10), Samuel mourned Saul's failure (1 Sam. 15:35), and Elijah despaired, even wishing for death after Jezebel's threats (1 Kings 19:4). These struggles show that prophets, despite their calling, were still humans subject to fear, doubt, and emotional turmoil. This thought reminds us of God's grace in using ordinary people to deliver extraordinary messages.

2. Old Testament prophets functioned according to a specific pattern.

Deuteronomy 18:15–19 outlines the role of a prophet, emphasizing his or her function as God's chosen messenger. A true prophet is called directly by Yahweh, not through personal ambition. This divine calling is crucial, as the prophet's role is to speak God's words, not his or her own. Many prophets, such as Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Amos, initially resisted their calling, feeling inadequate or fearing rejection. Yet, they were compelled to speak, often describing God's Word as an irresistible force (Jer. 20:9).

A true prophet comes from within the covenant community, “‘from your brothers’ ” (Deut. 18:15, ESV), ensuring a connection to God's people. Although God can speak through anyone, as with Balaam's donkey (Num. 22:28–30), He typically raises prophets from within His faithful community. Prophets acted as messengers, conveying God's commands without adding personal opinions. The word “messenger” best captures this role, as prophets delivered God's authoritative word, expecting it to be obeyed (see Eric J. Tully, Reading the Prophets as Christian Scripture: A Literary, Canonical, and Theological Introduction, pp. 58–62).

For Further Study: Read Edward J. Young, My Servants the Prophets (Grand Rapids, MI: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Company, 1952), pp. 20–37.

3. Believe in true prophets and distinguish them from false prophets.

The Old Testament provides clear criteria for distinguishing true prophets from false ones. A true prophet's message must be fulfilled (Deut. 18:21, 22) and align with God's commandments, promoting exclusive worship of Yahweh (Deut. 13:1–5). Even if a sign or wonder is fulfilled, a prophet is false if he or she leads people toward idolatry or away from God's covenant. True prophets never contradict God's established Word; their personal lives reflect holiness and integrity. False prophets, by contrast, were condemned for immoral behavior (Jer. 23:14).

True prophets often faced opposition and rejection, as their messages confronted sin and warned of judgment, unlike false prophets who offered comforting but deceptive words (Jer. 6:14). A true prophet's authority is confirmed through fulfilled prophecies, fidelity to God's law, moral integrity, consistency with prior revelation, and a willingness to speak hard truths, even when they are unpopular.

4. Women played a significant role in the Old Testament manifestation of the prophetic gift.

Huldah exemplifies the significant role women played in Old Testament prophecy. During King Josiah's reign, when the "book of the law" was discovered in the temple, Josiah sought divine guidance. He consulted Huldah, even though Jeremiah was active at the time (2 Chron. 34:22). This choice highlights the authority and respect Huldah held as a true prophet of Yahweh. Her message, delivered in two oracles, conveyed judgment and hope. She confirmed that the curses from Deuteronomy 28 would fall upon Judah because of persistent idolatry (2 Chron. 34:24, 25). Still, Huldah assured Josiah that his humility and repentance would spare him from witnessing the coming disaster (2 Chron. 34:26–28).

Huldah's role demonstrates how female prophets were entrusted with authoritative, divine messages that guided the nation's leaders. Though her prophecy did not introduce new doctrinal truths, it applied existing Scripture to the current situation, reinforcing God's covenantal principles of judgment and mercy. Huldah's example reflects the respected role women could hold in the transmission of Old Testament prophecy, serving as vital messengers of God's truth.

5. Ellen G. White's experience of the prophetic gift had many similarities to the Old Testament prophets.

Ellen G. White's experience with the prophetic gift shares similarities with Old Testament prophets. In her second vision in December 1844, she foresaw the trials and opposition that she would face and initially resisted the call. Yet, the words "Make known to others what I have revealed to you" echoed in her mind.—Ellen G. White, Spiritual Gifts, vol. 2, p. 36. Naturally timid and shy, she was terrified of publicly sharing her visions. She sought prayer and encouragement from friends, feeling overwhelmed by the responsibility.

During one prayer session, she recounted a transformative experience: "While praying, the thick darkness that had enveloped me was scattered, a bright light, like a ball of fire, came towards me, and as it fell upon me, my strength was taken away. I seemed to be in the presence of Jesus and of angels. Again, it was repeated, 'Make known to others what I have revealed to you.'"—Ellen G. White, Spiritual Gifts, vol. 2, p. 37. Although this experience greatly encouraged her, she begged for humility, fearing self-exaltation, and was assured she would be afflicted with sickness if pride arose. This moment solidified her commitment to God's call.

Throughout her long ministry, Ellen G. White described herself as a “messenger,” emphasizing her role in conveying God’s messages rather than in holding a specific office. In 1903, she wrote: “From the year 1844 till the present time I have received messages from the Lord and have given them to His people. This is my work—to give to the people the light that the Lord gives me. I am commissioned to receive and communicate His messages. I am not to appear before the people as holding any other position than that of a messenger with a message.” —Testimonies for the Church, vol. 8, p. 237.

Despite her extraordinary gift, Ellen G. White remained deeply aware of her humanity. Her struggles mirrored those of biblical prophets who faced fear, doubt, and suffering in their ministries. She consistently shunned self-exaltation, focusing on faithfully delivering God’s messages, even when they brought criticism or hardship.

In both the Old Testament and in Ellen G. White’s experience, the prophetic gift was a profound calling, often accompanied by personal trials and deep humility. Though chosen for an extraordinary task, these messengers remained human, relying on God’s strength to fulfill their divine mission.

Part III: Life Application

The following life application questions, drawn from the commentary of this lesson, are offered to enrich your class discussion. Choose from among them, and from those in the lesson, the ones that will best engage your class in meaningful reflection.

- 1. The prophets called people back to faithfulness during spiritual decline. What are some areas today where prophetic voices are needed?

- 2. How can we cultivate a heart that listens, and responds, to God’s message, rather than resists it, as many in Israel did?

- 3. In the prophets’ lives, what personal lessons can we find regarding perseverance, faith, and obedience to God’s calling?

4. God uses imperfect people to carry out His divine mission. How does this truth affect how we view our weaknesses and limitations in serving God?

5. Many prophets initially resisted their calling, yet God compelled them to speak. Have you ever felt called to do something but hesitated? What helped you move forward?

6. False prophets in the Old Testament often told people what they wanted to hear instead of what they needed to hear (Jer. 6:14). How can we ensure that we seek truth rather than just comforting messages?

7. Like Huldah, how can we apply God's Word to our present situation and guide others toward truth?

8. Ellen G. White initially resisted her calling, much as Moses and Jeremiah did. Have you ever felt God leading you to something outside your comfort zone? How did you respond?

9. Ellen G. White referred to herself as a messenger rather than as a prophet, focusing on delivering God's messages rather than claiming a title for herself. In what ways was she a messenger? What can we learn from her attitude of humility in ministry?
